

Applicant Visits to the Wright Patterson Residency Program

Wright Patterson USAF Medical Center Clinical Psychology Residency (Internship) Program

The Wright Patterson Medical Center Psychology Service will host an Applicant Open House for those who would like to visit the department, interview with the faculty, meet our residents, and receive an in-depth look at our program offerings.

All applicants who are interested in visiting Wright-Patterson and learning more about our internship program are urged to arrange their visits during this open house. Visits outside of these open house periods will be accommodated, but will be more difficult to arrange, and will be more limited in content.

The open house schedule will include presentations describing the Psychology Residency Program as a whole, core and mini-rotations, and other elements of the program. During the afternoon, we will conduct interviews with psychology staff and individual or small-group meetings with current residents. Applicants must make their own hotel and transportation arrangements, at their own expense. Check with your recruiter about reserving on-base accommodations for a minimal fee.

The required “Senior Consultant Interview” cannot be done at the open house. Please make separate arrangements for this interview with one of the three Air Force Internship Training Directors. These interviews may be done by telephone.

Applicants are not obliged to attend these sessions. An on-site interview is not required for equal consideration for admission to the Wright Patterson program. The individual interviews that are required for completion of application materials can be done by any of the training directors at the three AF internship sites, and can be accomplished by telephone or in person at times other than the Applicant Open House program. Our own data show that applicants do not adversely affect their chances of admission to the Wright Patterson program should they choose to interview by phone rather than in person, or with a training director other than Dr. Rowe.

We are planning an optional Dinner/Social event at a local restaurant at 6:30 p.m., on November 18 for those who plan to arrive on Thursday. This will provide an opportunity for relaxed conversations between staff, current residents and open house attendees in a casual atmosphere.
